

Retired Membership

Stay connected with RSPH

Our Retired members are brimming with invaluable public health knowledge and experience. They help shape our policy work, guide the direction of the organisation and help us to champion the public's health.

By becoming a Retired member, you can stay in touch and involved with the Royal Society for Public Health. Membership ensures you can keep your connections with likeminded professionals and continue to have your voice heard on the areas of public health that you're passionate about.

RSPH Retired membership is open to anyone who:

- ✓ Has been an RSPH member at any point in their career
- ✓ Is no longer working in paid employment
- ✓ Is over the age of 65

What benefits do I get as a Retired member?

By staying connected to RSPH as a Retired member, you'll be able to use your expertise to shape the future of public health and keep your access to the wealth of RSPH member benefits, including:

- Access to our journals
- Monthly newsletter with the latest public health news
- Discounts on our events and conferences
- Opportunities to shape our work
- Invites to our AGM and member-only events
- Be invited to participate in our webinar programme
- Access to our Members' Area
- Join any or all of our Special Interest Groups covering Food Safety, Water Safety, Arts and Health and Behaviour Change
- Discounts on our online courses

When can I apply for RSPH Retired membership?

When your RSPH membership is up for renewal and you are either retired or about to retire, you can get in touch with us and we will amend your membership for you. Your Retired membership will then take effect from the next renewal.

“RSPH is on the cutting edge of global public health, from global health security to obesity, from injuries to mental health. Being a member means being part of a global network of public health scholars, practitioners, and advocates.”

Professor Lawrence O. Gostin FRSPH, Georgetown Law

How much does RSPH Retired membership cost?

Retired Fellow - £68 a year
Retired Member - £63 a year

